MAN TAKES BIRTH CONTROL PILLS: GROWS CURVES!

WAS CURIOUS TO SEE WHAT WOULD HAPPEN

Working for the past three years in a drug factory where birth-control pills are manufactured hasn't been too helpful for Simpson Randolph, 29, of Vermont, Conn.

Randolph, a production worker at the Clarkson-Drell Drug Co. in Vermont, told medical doctors he has been affected by the pills which he took during the last four months.

Randolph admitted he had taken the birth-control pills "for kicks to see what they would do to me."

Randolph is one of the first men known to be affected by the Synthetic female hormones used in a new pill-taking process at Clarkson-Drell.

"I started getting headaches," said Randolph. "Then I noticed that my breasts were starting to swell and my hips did, too. I also felt completely impotent."

Randolph said he saw medical specialists. On their advice, he left his job in the pill producing department and moved to another position with Clarkson-Drell.

"I started to feel better," he said, "but my breasts were still swollen and I noticed that my voice was beginning to change - like a female's - and I was attracted to men, although I never went as far as having relations with any of them."

Medical advisors and officials of Clarkson-Drell were baffled about Randolph's condition.

"He took special precautions against such a thing like this occurring," said C-D executive L. Raymond Hobbs. "All of our 250 production workers were given periodic medical examinations."

"The problem has no bearing on the effectiveness or safety factor of our birth control pill," he cautioned. "However, I and the doctors find it hard to believe these pills would affect a male. The pills contain female hormones - for females - and shouldn't have any effect on the male body. We are completely baffled."

Randolph said he doesn't plan to sue Clarkson-Drell because he took the pills on his own initiative. However, he has volunteered to conduct research for C-D for a possible fertility pill for males.

"This could be an advance in science," said Randolph proudly. "This is how great inventions started - by accident. I don't think I could become pregnant - at least, I hope I can't."

Medical examiners have indicated that a man has never become pregnant before and they don't think it could happen to Randolph.

However, one physician cautioned: "No male has ever been affected by birth control pills before, so I guess anything can happen, although it's highly unlikely."

TRIES SEX TO PASS DRIVER'S TEST

Housewife got car bright and sparkling for her road test.

Examiner was devoted, family-type man.

HAD FAILED FOUR TIMES

Who said women drivers "don't know how to drive"? Whoever said it, may be right. An Ardmore, Pa., housewife, housewife, who had already failed her fourth driving test, decided to use sexual persuasion on the examiner the fifth time around - but it didn't help her driving.

Mrs. Morris Instadt, 27, however, failed her test for the fifth time Tuesday even though she tried to get her license by offering her body to the driving examiner to make up for her lack of driving ability.

During her fourth try a few weeks ago, Mrs. Instadt had turned to the examiner and said: "Is it any use offering you $25?"

The examiner, Henry P. Crick, 47, paid no attention to Mrs. Instadt. He was used to desperate bribes attempts, and was a local city examiner. He claims he never took money as a bribe.

Crick, after failing Mrs. Instadt on her poof driving, then turned her into police for offering a city employee a bribe. It cost her $25 in fines and she still hadn't passed her driving test.

Mrs. Instadt waited the necessary three week period before she was substituted to take her fifth, and final test - she hoped.

She climbed into the car Tuesday morning and sat, sitting on the opposite side, was examiner Crick.

Little closer to Crick and placed her hand on his.

He turned to her startled and when he did, she planted a kiss on his lips. "That's for being such a good examiner," she said.

BANKER ATTACKED BY WLD WOLF GIRLS

Shirley Mae Thornton, 20, one of the "wolf girls."

East Rockville, a suburb of London, known for its peace and quiet, became a furnace of excitement Sunday afternoon, when Edward L. Lansberry, 55, banker and philanthropist, was savagely attacked by two "wild wolf girls" on a secluded area of his huge estate.

From Lansberry's description, the girls, evidently living on LSD, were soon cornered in the backroom of The Prince's Pub on Highlander Lane, two miles from the estate.

The girls gave their names as Bonnie Lee Treadwell, 19, and Shirley Mae Thornton, 20, and their address as 980 Plum Street, Liverpool. Police are not sure the names and address are correct, but are carefully checking these and other details. Lansberry said that he was taking his usual Sunday afternoon stroll over his estate when the two beatnik girls attacked him from the rear, threw him to the ground and beat him with their fists.

They yelled, "Imperialist Imperialist!" as they ripped off most of his clothing and spit in his face.

Although 55, the banker struggled to his feet before he was stripped naked and battered off his attackers as if they were male hoodlums from the Soho district. He told police he knew they were girls because one was naked to the waist and the other had an open-front blouse which revealed her breasts. They used obscenities and profanity as they shouted in deep voices.

Police had their hands full when they tried to jail the girls in East Rockville.

"We had to use brute force to get the wild little beasts behind the bars," admitted Police Inspector Harold Gaschley. "I answered was right in calling them wolf girls."

A court-appointed attorney, however, stated that the girls revealed to him that they had been hired by Lansberry to come to his estate for the afternoon and indulge in "wild sort of orgy things with the banker." They said he agreed to pay them well, but when the afternoon was over he decided Took show to next town.

SAY HUSBANDS STAYED AWAY TO OGLE GIRLS

The women of East Holliston, Mass., tried for a technical knockout and won in the first round, as they won today as a local court promptly ordered lady wrestling in the city to be banned.

The women were "disgusted" at the girls' wrestling in public—especially in front of their husbands, who, incidentally, protested the court's decision.

Mrs. Ruth Ann Downes, 32, leading spokeswoman for the women said "we feel complete revulsion at the idea of women wrestling in public exhibitions."

"It's catering to the lowest instincts of people. It's both disgusting and degrading and we don't want our husbands watching such trash."

But the husbands apparently didn't agree with her and the other 30 women who picked the Holliston territory two weeks ago.

Lady wrestling matches are held at the Armory every Monday night and it usually packs in large crowds of about 2,500 each week—all men.

The townswomen say the wrestlers take their husbands away from them on Monday nights.

"It definitely has something to do with sex," said another woman, whose husband is an avid wrestling fan. "It's not a sport, they go there to watch those beastly looking girls pull at each other. It gives them some sort of sickle thrill."

The armory will be open Monday night, but a flower show, sponsored by the East

I HAVE THAT POWER

By John Fleetwood

(E.S.P. Expert)

I PREDICT more than 15 million Americans, both men and women, will be taking birth control pills by 1970. All other contraceptives, including the prophylactic, will virtually be non-existent by that time. However, since the pill will have been in use almost 15 years by 1970, enough time will have been needed to conduct proper research on the newest and most modern birth-control method. Medical findings will reveal that the pill probably does not harm the person presently taking it, but it definitely will hurt later generations which will eventually bring about new and unheard-of illnesses by next century.

I PREDICT four out of five Americans will be living in cities in the next 25 years. This country is getting more and more urban and more and more people are moving out of the country and off the farms and into large metropolitan areas which will make the metropolitan areas squeeze out into the country. The change will bring about many problems including over-population and, of course, a food shortage because of the lack of farmers.

I PREDICT a certain weekly news magazine will be scandalized because it will be revealed that some of its editorial staff are highly incompetent and don't know a thing about the assignments they cover.

I PREDICT fans of one of the professional football teams will boycott their team's games when it is learned that the championship game will be played on a neutral field—probably the Rose Bowl in Pasadena—which doesn't even have professional games played there during the regular season. The fans of the championship teams will protest, claiming the league office was unfair in taking the big game away from the loyal hometown fans. And then (the fans) will be absolutely right.

I PREDICT skin color will be able to be changed in the next few years. With the discovery of a certain enzyme, which will be found to influence skin color, a person may choose to change his color at any time.

I PREDICT an electronic "blackboard" teaching system will be put into use by the nation's schools, colleges and universities included, in conjunction with closed circuit television. The electronic "blackboard" will be able to transmit voice communication and handwriting over telephone lines for long-distance illustrated lectures. Students will be able to talk to instructors via a return video circuit while watching illustrations on a classroom television monitor.

I PREDICTED Lew Alcindor, 7-1 giant from UCLA will become the nation's number one college basketball player. Here's the rest of my starting five collegiate All-American basketball picks for 1966-67: Pat Riley, Kentucky; Wesley Unseld, Louisville; Jim Walker, Providence and Elvin Hayes, Houston.

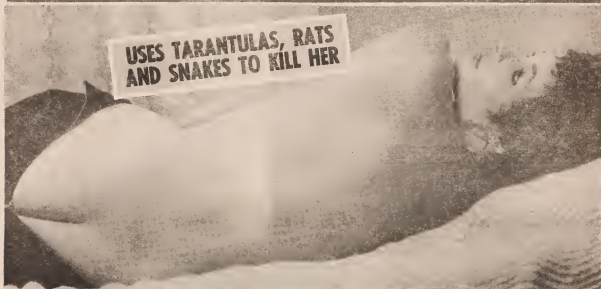

I PREDICT President Johnson will become seriously ill in the early months of 1967. It will be thought at first that the President was struck on with another heart attack, but it will turn out to be pneumonia which will lay him up for about a month. The illness will seriously hurt his chances for re-election in 1968.

I PREDICT a crackdown will be made on a suburb of a large United States city pertaining to the school system in that particular section of the state. The investigation will be prompted by the neighboring city claiming they are losing teachers to the suburbs because of the lower requirement standards allowed by the suburban board of education. The city will claim all their prospective teachers are applying for jobs in the suburb because it is easier to secure a teaching license there.

I PREDICT the "big band" will come back on the American music scene. The trend has already been started by the New York City nightclub, but it will soon catch on again throughout the rest of the country. Contrary to our latest bad trends, adults will start the fad.

SADIST MURDERS OWN SISTER

USES TARANTULAS, RATS AND SNAKES TO KILL HER

Dora Humphreys, 23, did not listen to warnings about her brother and would not have him committed as insane.

Police in Hamtown, S.D., have arrested Layton Humphreys, 34, for the murder of his sister, Dora, 23. They termed the murder "one of the most sadistic and horrifying ones ever seen."

Police chief Warren Sullen said that the dead girl had countless bites on her body. "She probably died from the bites of tarantula spiders. We found many in the house, as well as snakes and rats," said the Chief.

Humphreys has admitted that he purchased the tarantulas from an exotic pet store in Chicago and that he trapped the rats and snakes himself.

Friends of the dead girl have told police that her brother was a horrible sadist and that Dora was attached to him and tried to keep him from getting into trouble.

"When Dora told him she had a boyfriend and was going to get married he his neighborhood. In his teens he was indicted for severely beating an elderly couple.

However, his sister kept him close to home and tried to persuade him to see a psychiatrist. He did go to one for three years and this gave his sister some encouragement.

Humphreys told police that the murder of his sister was entirely premeditated.

"I wanted to really see her suffer," he said. "I bought the tarantulas and placed them in her room along the windows and locked her bedroom door from the outside. I watched from one of the outside windows as she frantically called for help and tried to claw her way

As soon as their lips parted, Miss Wells waited for a reaction, but nothing happened. Much to her delight, she grabbed the hyphen and kissed him again - more wildly than before.

Then it happened. Suddenly, Miss Wells' lips began to swell. They became so big that she couldn't close her mouth.

Then she became dizzy and started getting ill. Finally, Miss Wells went completely berserk. She dashed all over the bedroom, pulled off her clothes and danced around nude, screaming at the top of her lungs. "I want to kiss you! I want to kiss someone!! Someone wants to kiss me!! Please kiss me!!"

Miss Wells was hurriedly taken to a local hospital for emergency treatment. Doctors said she had a nervous breakdown.

Model Harriet Wells, 23, was forbidden to kiss by her doctor because of a strange allergy which only affected her lips.

Miss Wells, a beautiful girl who works for a fashion designer in Los Angeles, had many dates and fought off many an attractive and eligible male.

It was hard for Harriet to resist their advances, for she hadn't been kissed by a man in almost a year. Sometimes it was almost unbearable.

She begged to be kissed.

Saturday night Harriet had a date with a handsome Hollywood producer. She could see she would have to give into him in order to get a part in his upcoming movie.

Harriet held back at first, warning him of her plight and the possible repercussions. Nevertheless, Harriet couldn't resist. She wanted to kiss him passionately.

Finally, Miss Wells, in a near fit of rage, pulled the producer close to her and planted a kiss on his lips such as he'd never received before - at least, that's what

MOTHER DROWNS BABY IN SCALDING BATH

Infant was not properly cared for by mother revealed neighbors.

CLAIMS BABY'S CONSTANT CRYING DROVE HER CRAZY

A young mother was convicted of manslaughter in Centurion, Kans., Thursday after she admitted scalding to death her infant baby, in a boiling hot bath.

The mother, Mrs. Carlene Jamison, 19, wept when the jury returned the verdict.

In her defense, Mrs. Jamison told the jury that the baby, six months old, had been crying incessantly before her bath time. So much so, that the young mother had to cut short her own bath to quiet the child.

"I filled the bath with water and failed to test it to see if it was too hot," said Mrs. Jamison, near tears. "I picked her up and put her into the bath. She went white at first. Then she just screamed. I didn't know what to do."

A coroner said the baby had died from severe scalding. Mrs. Jamison at first told police the baby had fallen into the boiling water.

"I told everybody that the baby fell into the bath because I was frightened. I never intended to hurt her."

However, Mrs. Jamison's husband told police he had been having trouble with his wife ever since she first became pregnant.

"Carlene didn't really want the baby," he declared. "She told me she was too young and wanted to have fun and not be tied down."

"When the baby was born, she was very happy. But soon after, the baby became burdensome for her. Carlene has been depressed for the last three months."

A neighbor testified that

Mrs. Jamison didn't know how to take proper care of the child and often neglected it.

"She was always leaving the baby alone," said the

STOPS HONEYMOON TO BLOW UP BANK SAFE

Bank guard was alert.

Brides usually don't file for divorce on their honeymoons, but a Darwin, N.Y., newlywed filed for divorce three days after she was married.

Her husband, instead of spending his time with her, tried to rob a bank. Mrs. Christy Neelson, 23, said her husband completely neglected her on their honeymoon in Hawaii and she now wants her freedom on the grounds of cruel and inhuman neglect.

She said her husband, an admitted bank robber, Alvin Neelson, 25, didn't pay sufficient attention to her on their honeymoon. All he did was plot to rob another bank.

Three days after the couple was married, Neelson dynamited the vault of a Honolulu bank and attempted to get away with $150,000 before being subdued on the spot by Honolulu police.

"I know of Al's reputation before I married him," said a depressed Mrs. Neelson, "but I still loved him. I thought he'd be different after we married, but he was the same way."

"I am told by one of his friends that even on the day we were married he planned to hold up the bank."

Bride resented his taking honeymoon lightly and showed it.

ROBBERY BANK MORE IMPORTANT TO GROOM THAN LOVING BRIDE

Neelson wasted no time - honeymoon or not. He saw a good opportunity to rob the bank, and went ahead with it.

He spent very little time with his new wife as he was too busy with other thieves plotting the robbery.

In fact, Neelson admitted he had blown a safe in Arlington, N.Y., just two nights before his wedding day.

Neelson also admitted he had a craving for burglary and money and couldn't

"let a little thing like a honeymoon interfere with my plans."

Mrs. Neelson said her husband had a passion for his crime career, but he wasn't passionate toward her.

"Do you know what he did on our first night?" she asked. "He went over maps and diagrams of the Honolulu bank and hardly even paid attention to me at all."

Neelson said he planned his honeymoon to Hawaii (Continued on Page 18)

NAB FLORIST SELLING LSD SEEDS TO MINORS

A crackdown on florists selling "Morning Glory" seeds was instituted in Oregon last week following the arrest of an Ogden, Ore., florist. He allegedly sold the seed to minors for use in making an hallucination drug.

The seed, "Morning Glory," is rice-sized and produces a blue, bell-shaped flower. Up until last week, "Morning Glory" was cast to come by. They were even being sold near schools—for use in producing flowers, of course.

Florist Tucker Bregg, 37, was reported to have sold as many as 33 packages of the seed at a time. To produce the hallucination drug, the seed is ground down and taken like snuff.

The seeds have already been banned in many states throughout the nation following a Federal inquiry.

Bregg was arrested for selling illegal drugs and faces a sentence of five years if convicted.

One of the largest producers of the seed in this country, the M.B. Martin Horticulture Co. had advised shops to withdraw the seeds from general sale, pending an investigation in Oregon.

"We will start an investigation to find out whether large quantities of these packets are being sought by individuals," said a state official.

Tucker Bregg, curbstone florist, had been warned by inspector.

"MORNING GLORIES" WERE USED IN MAKING HALLUCINATION DRUG

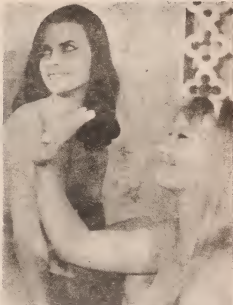

"We have not so far noticed any large repeat orders from anyone, aside from Bregg's, but we must take precautions."

One florist, who stopped the sale of "Morning Glories" long before the Bregg incident, said he took the precaution because of the Federal investigation a few years ago.

"I have had some requests from teenagers wanting the seeds," said Orville Nannen. "I think I know a drug addict when I see one."

Bregg had been warned one time before about selling the seeds when two teenager bought 20 packets. "The inspector told me the seeds contained a drug," said Bregg, when booked. "But I have no right refusing customers."

Several Oregon lawyers and state senators are trying to get a bill passed that would limit the sale of the "Morning Glory" seeds.

Bregg would not disclose his supplier of the "Morning Glory" seeds.

Police are further investigating the case and are looking for Bregg's supplier for a possible nation-wide "Blackmarket" seed selling ring.

Husband was a pro wrestler.

Mr. and Mrs. John Manley, of Benson, Utah, were married just three months ago. Last Friday night, after again refusing to have sexual relations, Manley was kicked out of bed by his wife, Alice.

Next morning the young wife went to court and filed a divorce against Manley, claiming he refused to perform his obligations as a husband. She says her husband is sterile, frigid and impotent.

INSIDE HUDDLE

BY ALAN GORDON

Notre Dame has got to be the most powerful and the best coached college football team we've seen in the past 15 years, if not one of the best ever.

What power, what defense, what offense. The Irish have everything - and they've got Ara Parseghian. He's got to be an inspiration to his kids standing on the sidelines with the blue Notre Dame sweater on, on tie.

In the game against North Carolina a few weeks back, Jim Seymour, one of the best ends to come into the game in a long while, caught a picture pass from another sophomore sensation, quarterback Terry Hanratty.

Seymour got a few steps in front of his man, about 40 yards out and snared the ball over his head like you see it in the movies.

Parseghian could have been mistaken for one of the cheerleaders as he jumped up and down like one of the students in the stands.

Watch the Irish line up in the defensive middle. Notice the back row stands with their hands clasped behind their backs - as if they were in an "at ease" position. You know Ara told them to do that - probably to relax them. Any coach who goes through the trouble of duelling on minor details like that has got to be great.

I don't like to get tricky in college football games because it's not so. There were only five schools last year who filled the stadium with 800 crowds every Saturday: Ohio State, TMI (and it's been a while since it had a winning team to speak of), Notre Dame and Washington. The rest had empty seats to spare.

Jim Don Looney, the NFL end, is teamed with Sam Tate. Guy at Washington isn't taking any chances. If anyone can jump the reliable Looney intact it will be Sam.

Of the 42 players picked up by the Atlanta Falcons in the NFL pool, only 23 remain in Atlanta uniform. More than half the players are from the Packers, Cardinals, Vikings and Lions.

Some nicknames: Lance Alworth is called "Hambi," Jon Avett is "Jaguar Jon," Sam Ball is "Dancing Bear," because of his size and dancing ability; Al Beniller is "Lombard," because he wanted to be a mortician; Rudy Rukick is "Rifle," Dino Cappelletti is "Duke," Gail Cagill is "Cowboy," Jim Colclough is "Gold Cuts," Mike Dika is "Hummer," Charlie Hennigan is "Hoss," Homer Jones is "Ribbon," Paul Lowe is "Sticks," Ray Maynard is "Smoking," Curtis McClain is "Count," Lenore Moore is "Spinelli," Art Powell is "King Pin," Charley Toler is the "Fusion Bouncing Ball," Donny Villanueva is "El Kickador," and Fred Williamson is "Playboy."

The New York Jets, apparently bound for the Eastern Division championship in the AFL, have six starters who were signed as free agents and three others picked up on waivers. Owner Sonny Werhlin likes to spend the long green, but he'll take a bargain anytime.

How much weight does college football's Heisman Trophy, for the year's outstanding player carry into pro football? Apparently not too much. Only one such winner, Kansas City's Mike Garrett (USC, 1965), is producing.

Unfortunately, Leubenton took probably the best Heisman winner away when Ernie Davis (Syracuse, 1961) passed away. Terry Baker of Oregon State (1962) was a big find with the Rams; Roger Staubach of Navy (1963) is serving his kitch; and John Huarte (Notre Dame, 1961) is wearing his hands under his backside with the Patriots. The 1960 winner, Joe Bellino of Navy, scored his first professional touchdown a few weeks ago. Of course, Joe served a few years in the service, but still, Heisman Trophy or no, he's doing much.

Football players make good assistant coaches. Some of the more notable pro players now assistant coaches: Ben Walker, Bus Mertes and Jerry Natanson, Denver; Bud McFadin and Walt Schlunkman, Houston; Les Bingham, Bob Pellegrini and Bobby Walston, Miami and Walt Michaels, Jets.

Tom Fears and John Symank, Atlanta; Sid Luckman, Chicago; Dick Nolan and Ernie Stautner, Dallas; Sammy Baugh, Carl Neuschneider, Joe Schmidt and Carl Pasini, Detroit; Dave Hanner, Bob Schneider and Ray Metcalfe, Green Bay; Lew Carpenter, Minnesota; Ken Kavanaugh, Tom Scott and Emile Tunnel, Giants; Dick Staufel, Philadelphia; Don Heinrich, Pittsburgh; Y.A. Tittle, San Francisco and Ray Renfro, Washington.

KIDNAP WRONG GO-GO GIRL

Kidnappers who goofed.

Would-be kidnappers, out to make a haul in Sacramento, Calif., last week pulled a big blunder that will have criminals all over the country laughing for a long time.

Two thugs, hired by the notorious William (The Spot) Spottano, 41, set out Saturday night to kidnap a young Go-Go dancer.

Go-Go dancer from the Gay Blade in downtown Sacramento.

However, they snatched the wrong girl - Spottano's girlfriend, Ruthie Maye, 25. Miss Maye, a Go-Go dancer herself at the Gay Blade, informed her boyfriend of a pretty Go-Go dancer at the club, whose father was very wealthy.

Spottano and his boys jumped at the opportunity of making a big haul in ransom money if they could snatch Katie Dell, 22, daughter of far tycoon Ramon Dell, 52.

Miss Maye told Spottano how and when would be the right time to make their catch. She went so far as to ask Miss Maye into her Young heiress who was overlooked by the kidnappers.

Ruthie Maye, also a Go-Ga girl, was in on the kidnapping.

HIRED THUGS SNATCH MOBSTER'S OWN GIRLFRIEND IN BAD MIX-UP

dressing room at the time Spottano's henchmen would arrive.

At about 12:30 a.m. Sunday, on schedule, but unaware of her plight, Miss Dell came into Miss Maye's dressing room "for a drink."

The two men hired by Spottano had a fairly good description, or as they thought, of Miss Dell, furnished by Miss Maye.

As Miss Dell and Miss Maye were having a drink in the small dressing room, in stormed the two thugs, quickly grabbed Miss Maye, the wrong girl, and carried her off in a blanket.

They carried her out a back door and threw her into a car and headed for Spottano's hideout.

Once there, the thugs carried out the by-now screaming Go-Go dancer and brought her to Spottano.

Looking pleased at the smoothness of the operation thus far, Spottano unwrapped the blanket, and much to his surprise, his girlfriend, Miss Maye, angrily stared him in the eye.

Meanwhile, Miss Dell ran to police and told them of the kidnap of Miss Maye. The gang was rounded up in a few short hours, thanks to excellent detective work.

Because he kidnapped his own girlfriend, Spottano is now faced with a long-term jail sentence.

Meanwhile, Miss Dell was terrified to find out from police that she was the intended kidnap victim.

"I'm glad they got the wrong girl," she was quoted as saying, "better for that, me."

Helped add to confusion of the two kidnappers.

LOCKED IN CLOSET OVERNIGHT WITH 3

NUDE MODELS

Two thieves locked models and photographer in closet and stole studio equipment.

CHATTED, TOLD STORIES, PLAYED GAMES TO KEEP UP THEIR SPIRITS

A man and three young models — all male, were freed Friday night after being locked in a closet for 17 hours by thugs in Westmont, Neb.

John Beasley, a photographer, and the three models were locked in a closet in Bensley's studio apartment Thursday as thieves escaped with $3,000 worth of photographic equipment.

It was only by courtesy of the thieves that the four were released. An anonymous phone call to police brought news of their plight.

Their ordeal began at 10 p.m. Thursday night as Beasley, a commercial photographer, was preparing to shoot the three models for an advertising campaign.

Bensley, who didn't look any the worse from his long ordeal, said two thieves broke into the apartment, locked him and the girls in a closet which contained photographic equipment.

"The closet was only about eight foot square," said Beasley. "We hardly had any room to move. We got hungry after awhile, but I guess our yells for help weren't heard."

The three girls, 21-year-old Clara Chandler, 22-year-old Della Moore and Kitty James, 19, said they thought about James Bond and his adventures and it gave them courage.

"We thought about Bond and how he would escape, but I think even he would have had to sit it out," said

Photographer was crowded in, Miss Moore.

The girls, who wrapped blankets around themselves to hide from the watchful eyes of the police, said the foursome chatted, told stories and played games. But worst of all, they got hungry.

All four said it was a harrowing experience, "but if it weren't for our good spirits," noted Miss Chandler. (Continued on Page 17)

Let's be frank about it ADVICE FOR LOVERS

By ENID WINTERS

QUESTION: I'm 14 and want to get married right away to a man of 24. Before you say I'm all wrong, you should know the facts about my home life. My mother is a divorcee and I know my father gave her a hard time before they finally broke up, but that's no excuse for her to make my life miserable, is it? She is forever complaining about how hard she's worked to support me; how I've prevented her from remarrying because no man wanted a woman with a child; how her health is ruined. Everytime I go home it's one complaint after the other, and if I turn on the radio to listen to rock 'n' roll, to drown out my mother's complaining, she says I'm being rude. I'm fed up and since this man wants to marry me, don't you think it would be the best way to escape from an impossible home life?

D.L., Green Bay, Wis.

ANSWER: While a few girls your age are mature enough for marriage, the majority aren't, and from your letter, I'd judge that you belong to the majority. After all, marriage isn't the way to escape from an unhappy home, as many girls have learned too late. You don't say anything about loving this man, and I wonder what kind of man he would be to want a 14-year-old bride when he's 24. Although I sympathize completely with you in your dreary home situation, try to stick it out until you finish high school, and even then, don't rush into marriage just to escape from your mother's depressing complaints.

QUESTION: All the kids in my class in high school are swingers. The girls go all the way with their dates; they try all the new drugs like pot and LSD; they watch stag movies in some kid's house when his parents are out. I want to stay a decent girl, but I can't go through four years of school without a single friend. Although I was brought up to be respectable and well-behaved, I'm beginning to think it doesn't pay off and I'd do better to follow the crowd. What do you think?

L.C., Flint, Michigan

ANSWER: Unless you go to a very unusual school, I think you're exaggerating when you say that you're the only kid who doesn't do all these things you mention. Remember, it's always the swingers who attract attention, but there are probably many girls — and boys — like yourself, who'd be happy to have a quieter social life. Give yourself time to find them. Since you say you have four years to go, I assume you've just started high school. Be patient. Don't go off the deep end, and sooner or later you'll make friends.

QUESTION: My son is overseas in Vietnam fighting for his country and his wife, a little tramp he married only a few weeks before he shipped out, is now playing around with other men. She won't admit it, but I've heard so much gossip around our neighborhood that I know it's true. I knew she was that type the minute I first saw her, but, of course, my son wouldn't listen to me. Now I think it's my duty as a mother to write and tell him. At least, he could have her allotted stamped. Why should he be supporting her while she plays around with other men?

O.C., Brooklyn, N.Y.

ANSWER: Even if your daughter-in-law is playing around with other men, and you only have the word of the neighborhood gossips that she is, I don't think you should write and tell your son about it. If you really love your son, you'll realize that such a letter would do more to wreck his morale and add to his problems than anything else you might do. Besides, since you say that you've always thought this girl was a tramp from the first time you met her, it's not likely that you're in any position to judge her actions now or in the future. At any rate, think of your son's welfare and don't write him any letter that will disturb him at this crucial time.

QUESTION: My husband is in the army reserve and he's driving me crazy because he wants me to run our home like a barracks, with everything in an exact place, nothing even an inch out of line. He insists that he must be able to bounce a quarter off the bed after I've made it. What should I do?

B.G., Los Angeles, Cal.

ANSWER: Tell him you're not a member of his platoon and that you have no intention of turning your home into a military encampment. If he wants to bounce you on the bed, fine — but tell him to forget about the quarter.

WEEK OF DECEMBER 4

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 20) You will be wise to use this week as a week of rest, as next week is likely to be strenuous. Anything you can do to straighten out your business affairs will be useful. There will probably be nothing to interfere with what you want to do.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 21-Jan. 19) This week will be unsettling and upsetting. Travel is not recommended and tact will have to be used with relatives. Your imagination will be helpful in overcoming pessimism. Loved ones may be critical. But friends may produce some relief.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Too much mental energy must be used with care to avoid hasty action and impetuosity. Do not argue over religious matters or become involved in legal disputes. Your mate or partner will probably be helpful and may bring a lot of good luck.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) This is a fortunate week for attending to your partnership or family resources. Officials or important people will probably be helpful. Deal with tax matters, wills, legacies or your estate. Useful information will probably be obtainable.

ARIES (March 21-April 20) The week is favorable for agreements and collecting old debts. Deal with tax matters. Some good luck may appear that will be helpful in a pet project. The week is good for work done in cooperation with others. New advertising campaigns may be started. In-laws will probably be congenial.

TAURUS (April 21-May 20) It is a fairly good week for working in association with others. Being definite will offset the possibility of misunderstandings. Otherwise, the week will probably be about average. It is not favorable for legal affairs or for making changes.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your mental dexterity will probably be helpful in your work on your job. Associates will probably be cooperative and agreements with them will be fortunate. Short trips and conferences may be necessary and fortunate. Use your new ideas.

CANCER (June 21-July 20) This will be a pleasant but probably not a very important week in your activities. Travel and visits are favorable but might be somewhat dull. It is a good week for rest and for improving your health, if you feel a little below par. Mental recreation is best.

LEO (July 21-Aug. 21) Financial matters will likely be hectic and no important moves should be made. Avoid unnecessary spending. There may be arguments which will require tact to keep them from becoming quarrels. Taxes or the expenses involved with elders may cause worry.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Your feelings will have to be controlled or your impatience will bring arguments or quarrels. Do not be too energetic. Personal plans can probably be advanced through the help of friends. Your energy is high but needs direction.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This is a fortunate week for your affairs, particularly financial matters. People will probably be congenial and helpful. It is a good week for consulting with superiors or other influential people. Matters of affection will be favorable for advancing a romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 22) Be careful not to jump to conclusions or plunge into important moves without knowing all the facts involved. Take time to think before acting. Too much enthusiasm can create mistakes. Or you may be a little irritable with slower people.

HORSES THAT ARE READY TO WIN

By TEDDY RAND

TWO OF THE GREATS

Two of the most popular figures in American sports returned a couple of weeks ago to the place of their greatest triumphs. KITSO, the greatest of the great, and TED ATKINSON, perfection in the saddle, were among the old timers that were honored Nov. 3 "Old Timers' Day at Aqueduct."

KITSO, who is an old-timer at the ripe age of nine, and TED ATKINSON who looks good enough to saddle up, is 50.

Technically, a return to the Big A was no homecoming for TEDDY, the jockey, for he never rode at the Big A. The racing factory was opened on Sept. 14, 1959, approximately eight months after ATKINSON got a horse called YET'S BOY home first at Tropical Park. He re-injured his back on YET'S BOY in this race, limped in to see Dr. Alexander Keyes, and got the bad news that his riding days were numbered.

TED rode one more mount after that, and then called it quits after 22 glorious years. Now he is a state steward in Illinois.

I've seen there are many among us who couldn't help remember when they saw TEDDY, after so many years, how he would keep us in walking-around money by usually hauling down the last race of the day.

As we watched KITSLY, who could do more things better on more occasions over a longer period of time than any other horse, the event brought the past back, as we saw him paraded down the back stretch we could remember the music in his magic strides.

KITSO, the incomparable, and TEDDY the jockey's jockey, had come home for a brief moment, and for those of us who love racing, it was a moment to be remembered.

TRAINERS CHATTER

Trainer Nick Combs wonders why owners and reporters say little about jockeys who finish second on a horse.

"Many is the time that the jock that finishes second puts up a better ride than the jock on the winner," says Combs, former jockey for Alfred Vayterbilt and now a successful trainer.
